TEST Prep

These UDL-styled, dynamic, tailored, remote classes feel like off-road adventures! Every session takes a fresh path via Socratic dialogue and deep-dive exploration. No two classes ever look, sound, or feel the same. Learners build thematic, historical, and current real-world knowledge, and expand their collaboration, communication, and critical thinking skills. This adventurous approach inspires motivation, creativity, confidence, and a deeper personal commitment to learning.

Organic, Dynamic, Learner-Oriented, Deep-Dive Instruction for Diverse, Organic Dynamic Learners

Our Disclaimer and Commitment to People and Planet

Our classes and instruction are based on verified global, scientific, and historical knowledge and best practices; guided by principles of equity, equality, inclusivity, and mutual respect; committed to open and honest dialogue and via the Socratic method, critical inquiry, and writing, actively address and work to dismantle systemic issues of racism, poverty, classism and elitism, and the myths that perpetuate them.

While religion may be discussed within the context of social sciences, we are not affiliated with, nor do we promote, any religious organization, doctrine, or denomination. We support secular education.

Our educational approach is politically nonpartisan. We simply teach students due diligence, to follow the facts and documented evidences, and from that to draw logical and reasonable conclusions.

We do not avoid or omit difficult truths; instead, we engage with them through critical and analytical discussion. We uphold the belief that classrooms must remain safe, inclusive spaces where student voices are respected, ideas are openly exchanged, and collaborative learning leads to evolution, enrichment, and empowerment of all; Anyone choosing to disrespect fellow students, instructors, or the safe zone will be given one warning and on repeat of the offense will be permanently dismissed without refund.
